

Fruhstorfer in Seitz

M. mineus, another protean species, but becoming somewhat rarer than perseus in the Malayan archipelago. From Java, for instance, I have not a single example. Yet the early stages are more accurately known. mineus is often confused with perseus, but the scent-area of the hindwing is larger and more glossy than in perseus F., with a longer, narrow androconial cavity, which is filled up with red-brown or grey scales.
